Jack was an amazing influence in my life, though I only knew him for a short time. I was working and attending St. Pete College around the time that Jack had published Citizen's Handbook. He was a customer at a retail store where I worked and would always spark my interest with his views on American government. On how it is, and how it is supposed to be. I decided to look him up today and sadly found this site. I am saddened by the fact that I waited so long, missing my opportunity to better know such a brilliant and interesting person. Best wishes to Jack (wherever he may be) and to his family. I will always have my First Edition copy of Citizen's Handbook so Jack will always be in my memory. Always, George F.

For those of us who are struggling with the sudden loss of Jack's physical presence, I would like to share something that is helping me. I am finding peace and comfort by the presence of his unique spirit in my memories. May God grant each of Jack's friends and loved ones this gift of joy that comes from our own special memories of him. May we be encouraged to live our own lives with passion and joy to be able to create such memories for our own loved ones to have when it is our turn to leave this world. Thank you Jack, for being you! Donna Dodds Bouterse
