Natasha Knobel

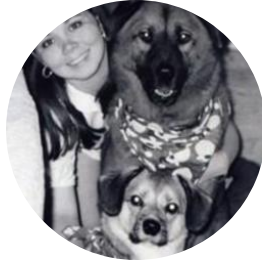

JUL 31, 1984 - JAN 7, 2012

Natasha Courtney Knobel passed away Saturday, January 7, 2012. She was born July 31, 1984, in Ft. Worth, TX and moved to Florida in 1997. She graduated from Largo High School in 2002, was a cast member at Howl-O-Scream, and was enrolled at UMA, where she was about to graduate as a dental assistant. She was a courageous young woman, who endured years of physical trials and tribulations. In spite of her body's limitations, "Tash" was a bright light in the lives of everyone she touched and she lived her life to the fullest in the short time she had here on earth. Tasha is survived by her parents, Hans and Tonja Knobel. She also leaves behind her grandparents, her brother, Deandre, her "other brothers" from DHS Class of 2009, her close friend, Roger Picard, and many aunts, uncles, cousins, and other extended family members and close friends who will never forget her. Visitation will be Wednesday from 6 to 8 PM at Moss Feaster Funeral Home, 1320 Main St., Dunedin, where a celebration of Tasha's life will be held on Thursday at 2:30 PM. Flowers will be accepted or donations may be made in her memory to the Polycystic Kidney Foundation (pkdcure.org).

Tash, Today marks two years since that horrible day when we lost you. I can't believe that all this time has passed without you here with us. At the same time, the memory of that phone call and the events that followed, while a blur in many ways, still feels so very raw - as if it was only last week, which may be why I try to keep that memory buried deep inside. Allowing it to come to the surface is still just so painful, yet not a day goes by without the thought of you first thing each morning; without you on our minds and in our hearts during the day; and without realizing how much we miss you in our quiet times at night. Tash, losing you left a hole in our hearts that will never be healed. How I wish that I could turn back the time - to give you one more hug; to see that smile that could light up a room one more time; to tell you one more "I love you". It wasn't fair that you were taken away so soon - you had so much life ahead of you and so many more lives to touch. I don't think I will ever understand. We miss you and love you - always will. Dad

Another holiday is coming. Your mom is bravely making this Christmas the best she is capable of doing. Today she placed your nut crackers on the shelf. She said you gave her one every year. Mom and Hans talk of you often and even smile at times when your name is mentioned. Tasha I hope you are surrounded by all the angels in the groups that know your mom. It would mean a lot to me that you give Christopher a big hug and kiss from his grandmother. He is loved and thought of often by me. This year again your mom has been shopping for kids and family they have adopted that would not receive much or anything. In your memory and I know the smiles and hugs she will see when she delivers the gifts to them. Send her some signs to ease her broken heart. Not a day goes by she has not said your name or recalled a memory you shared. Tasha, I had better sign off it is getting late. I was sitting here earlier that I hoped your mom would post your sight. Up popped it as I was going through my e-mails. Magical how that happens. Sending you hugs and wishes that we one day will meet. I know I will be there one day to run into Christopher's arms and never to be apart. I hope I get to meet you there too. You have touched me with your zest for life. I think of your mom as my friend. She gives of herself in many ways. She shares her adventures and with loads of pictures of her travels. She is a mighty fine lady... Happy holidays to you and all our angels with you in God's Heaven above..... Hugs

For Tasha on her birthday July 30, 2013 When I look into Tasha's eyes I see.....Dimples and eyes so bright...Tasha walks in beauty. Her heart and love for her mom and Hans can not be broken. She loved life to the fullest. Many friends still remember the days they shared. Tasha never gave up her fight. Knocked down to her knees...she picked herself up and moved on. As the years past and Tasha blossom to a beautiful young lady. She loved to shop for clothes and shoes. Tonja and Tasha were very close. They talked about dreams and fun they would have. Just sitting at home and watching a movie was so much fun to do on a Saturday night. When Tasha was in her room with the radio on, reading the new best author latest novel. She loved her dogs and played with them outside. Seldom could you see her without a smile on her face. Tasha could go to the park and in no time she had several children by her side. She loved to tell stories of the places she went to on vacation. I can hear the laughter in the kids as she pushed them on the swings high in the air. I know she would become a teacher. The kids would love her and hug her each day. She would make them feel important and cared for each day. Tasha was a gift to Florida. She loved the ocean and how the waves flowed in and out. When she was little she loved to pick up the shells. She had a special box that she saved all her favorites. Tasha knew no strangers. She was friendly and funny in her special way. Just want to wish you, Tasha a Happy Birthday In Heaven. Send down a basket of hugs and kisses to your mom today.....

One year - Yesterday marked one year since you left, Tash. I keep saying the same things over and over - seems like yesterday - seems like it has been forever. I miss everything about you - the good things, like your smile, your giggle, your strength, your courage, the love you had for people - I even miss the bad, like your bad temper and your ability to find drama. I am not sure there is anything I don't miss about you. I remember the texture of your hands - how they felt when they held mine - no matter how much lotion you used, they always felt like they could have used a little more. I remember the green specks in your brown eyes - the way those specks glistened in the sun - dancing with light - with laughter - and, other times, dark, with sadness and pain. The cheeks you hated so much that I loved - the little slope of your nose - the nose you wanted to change - the one I always thought was perfect for your face from the day you were born. I loved to kiss your one chicken pox scar right beside your left eye. I think one of the things that I miss most - that I find it hardest to recreate is the sound of your voice. There will never be a replacement for that. There is no one else to call me "Mommy" and that makes me the saddest of all. I miss everything - but, I miss that the most. For you, I try to think of the bad things you are NOT missing. There is no more dialysis - no more needles - no more surgeries - no more infections - no more hospitalizations - no more side effects - NO MORE PAIN!! wonder if the trade-off is worth it. I hope that it is for you. I hope you found peace and health in a restored body. But, I still don't understand why it had to be one way or the other. I don't know why you either had to live with pain or die and leave me in pain. There should have been some middle ground. We both deserved better. I was a fifteen-year-old girl when I had you. I learned more from looking into your eyes than I ever learned from any book. You taught me how to be a grown-up - you taught me what unconditional love is - you taught me what strength looked like. The downside to those lessons is that I have a gaping hole where my heart is and I am not sure what to fill it with without you here, Tash. I try - and I will continue to try as long as I can - but, I know there is nothing that can ever fill the space in my heart where you live...

Tash,Here it is, one year after that devastating day, and I still struggle to accept the reality that you are really gone and are never coming back. I can't believe it's been a year since we last saw you. How could this happen? How could you leave us? I still struggle to understand it; trying to make sense of it - wonder if I ever will.Our days are consumed with thoughts of "what if", "remember when", and "if only". How much we love you; how much we miss you; how we wish we could turn back time and change everything, to see you one more time, give you one more hug, make everything better again...You were our only daughter, you were our everything. All your mom and I can do is take each day as it comes and try to find a way to get through the day and move on with life without you in it. I can't believe I'm even saying that, since it does not seem real. You are always there with us, in everything we do, everything we think about, everything we say... Some days, we are better at hiding the pain than others, but it's always there - it probably always will be.We will always love you and we miss you every day. Dad

I couldn't write here yesterday - no matter how often I tried. I don't know why - words are usually easy for me - no matter the situation. But, not yesterday. Not one word could I type. Then, last night, you came. I woke up sitting up, as if I still had the phone in my hand and with your voice ringing in my ears. I love you, Tash - 6 months without you feels like an eternity. Everyday is harder than the last. And, just as I feel like I can sink no lower, there you are - your voice in my ear, answering my questions, telling me about you and that you love and miss me - just like old times. But, I still don't know if it is enough. You are the best thing I ever did - you are the last thing on my mind at night - the first thing when I wake up in the morning - and, so, often during the day. Six months isn't a long time - unless it's six months without you. I work everyday to try to do something for you - I don't want anyone to forget you and all you meant. I'm trying to stretch my wings, do things that you would like - living for two now. I just wish that I knew exactly what I should be doing - what is it that would give you the most joy? I love you, Tash - I have from the moment I first felt you move inside me - I will never stop and I cannot wait to see you again - to hold your hand, kiss your face, and just be with you again. MOM

Tasha we miss you so much. We have so many memories of you. Grady always thinks of you when you 1st came to visit in Florida and helped him walk after his knee surgery. He has always said you really helped him. I think of when you came to visit and had pool and you wanted to go swimming and it was cold. I finally said let her go she will not stay long(I told most kids that) you were turning blue and so determined you to stay to prove me wrong. You held the record. You always had a determination and that is one of your special qualities. I could go on but I am not good at saying what I really want to say but we love you and will miss Thanksgiving and Christmas together. They will not be the same. We hurt but know you are not hurting now.

And can I just say...Your Facebook Rocks! The messages you get daily are amazing..you would love it!! You truly were a wonderful young lady. Watching all the people who came to honor you was truly my pleasure...I hope you know how many people loved you!! You always had a smile, a true light in everyone's life. I wish I would have done my part as your aunt, for not knowing you is my loss. I have your pictures up and Zoey & Hadley know you are their cousin and you are in Heaven watching over them. I think they feel like they know you...and I will continue to make sure they feel that way. I know you are dancing in the streets of Heaven, possibly wearing a costume trying to scare someone!! You are pain free and for that I'm grateful....but I sure wish you were back home with your mom and dad. They love you sooo much Tash...I know you are watching over them and will always be their guardian Angel. I love you and think of you often. Your mom and I love you more than anything in the world and our hearts are broken into so many pieces. There are so many thoughts and feelings that run through my head. I think of the many happy and beautiful times we spent together. At the same time, I can't help but think of the many more hugs I should have given you and the "I love you's" I should have told you. What I wouldn't give for one more chance to see you, hold you and talk to you. I will probably never understand why you had to suffer so much pain in your short life, and I can only hope that you are truly free of that pain now and that you are showing everyone in heaven that beautiful, ever-present smile that we will all miss so much. I love you - you will always be mommy and daddy 's little girl and we will spend the rest of our lives keeping your memory alive until we will all be together again. I miss you, I love you... I was planning on speaking at your funeral yesterday, but yesterdays service was just a viewing/visitation and no one did speeches. I'd drive there again today, but instead I'm going to choose to speak my heart here. Besides, I know I would had broke down at least once, so this will be far easier this way. I really admired you Tasha. From all I knew about you you were bright beyond your 27 years. You are a survivor, you persevere, and you have a good heart. I didn't know to what extent you were a survivor and which I did so I could had been there more. I know you had some medical issues. I read your post on facebook and been concern about you and we chatted, yet you never lead me to believe your condition was severe and in no way critical. You were a trooper! I knew you were a TRUE HOS'er !!!! You LOVED IT and I could tell. I knew you'd be around HOS for some years and looked forward to working with you in the same house/zone or a nearby one. After all, we are both very short/thin so I figured one year we may be casted as the same part ;-) We are all STUNNED you're not here and won't be at Howl-O-Scream anymore!!!! For those of her friends and family who do not understand HOS, it's a GREAT outlet for many of us cast members. We really enjoy doing HOS and the break from reality to gives us from our real lives and all that may be hurting us or stressing us. Also, being Tasha is about the same size as me I'm sure to some extent she also enjoyed the thrill of scaring and getting at people far bigger and stronger. It's a good rush and we know at the end of the day HOS is all done in good, honest fun. I don't want to push religion, but I have to say that I do believe in God. After all, I honestly can't see logic into thinking we all come from nothing but space as we are too complex and it just does not make sense to me. I do NOT understand why many good people die young or before their late years, but we have to somehow accept it as much as it stinks!!!! In many ways it really don't seem much help to say "She's in Heaven" because we are hurting now, as Tasha, like many of our loved ones are no longer here on Earth with us, but I do see them as not gone, but have moved on, and we all will see each other someday. I really believe that!!!! It also seems weird and unexplainable why our thoughts work as they do as if it comes from above sometimes! As I already told some friends that on Saturday evening I was at Applebees restaurant in Kissimmee, FL watching the NFL football playoff game and I was sitting on their outside patio and during the late 3rd or early 4th quarter of the game, aprox around 6:30pm Saturday eve, I saw a lady leave Applebees and thought, "That looks like Tasha about 10-20 years from now." I thought of Tasha that night, her last evening with us! Just odd that of all the people I know in this world how it came to be I saw someone that looked like an older Tasha and thought of her and I had no idea she wouldn't be with us much longer! I know she's at peace and smiling. We need to see any bright side we can in all the sorrow we face in our lives. I know Tasha did and she wants us to keep a smiling face too. RIP. Love, your little sister HOS'er, Lisa Bamberger.

God, bring comfort and peace. Peace is your essence. Peace is your name. Bring peace to this family who has lost their precious child in death. We come to you, God because we know that you sorrow, and are acquainted with grief. You too have endured the loss of a child. You empathize. We can't help but ask, "Why?" Forgive our insistence, our confusion, even our anger. We believe that you are just, and we ache to understand how this tragic death is an expression of that justice, how it expresses your love. We also know - in our minds at least - that you seldom answer the "why?" question. We press you, but on these matters you are mostly silent. What we ask instead is "how?" How can we move forward? How can this bring us together and not tear us apart? How can we now live under the shadow of this untimely death? Answer this prayer with your comfort and guidance. There is no way to remove the pain. The grief is real. The only sanity is to know, to believe, in a life beyond with you, when all the scales are righted and the sufferings are made good. We trust you and your promise that while this child's life on earth is done, her life beyond has just begun. With that release we lose her and let her go into your arms, then by faith receive in return the boundless comfort of your presence. That is all, that is enough. In Jesus. My condolences to the Knobel family, extended family and close friends of Natasha, or as I would call her sometimes "Nuttasha" for her light the room personality. she was a young woman that did the best she could, despite many setbacks with her health. She did more than many healthy people I know, sometimes w/ extra efforts not required. When I was in pain or having difficulties in my life you could just look at Tasha smiling back at you and think it's not so bad and things could be worse. Knowing her from Hallowscream these many years and considering her a real friend to me and many others, She is an inspiration that I will miss sadly with the many. I remember this past HS that she was joking with me about being typecast as a child all the time, small in stature big in heart! If I make it to Hallowscream this year, in her memory I hope to make this my best year. One year before she met and played with my dog at Village Inn after Hallowscream I think she will miss Tasha too. Rest peacefully in Heaven as you are of the few to deserve this honor. So sorry to hear of this untimely tragic loss. HS.Ghost-Host James & Spicey Graham, Tampa

Tasha so many things to say about one of the greatest young women I've known in my life time. I became very close to Tasha and felt like she was my daughter from another. She always had a smile for me, even when I visited her in the hospital. I would watch her sleep, kiss her forehead and pray with all my heart that she would be okay. She was outgoing, happy, loving, caring, giving, sweet and one girl to be very proud of. She accomplished so much in her short life. Tasha, baby doll I miss and love you so very much. You were always a bright light in my life that I will never forget. I will miss our long talks...RIP baby doll thank you for being in my life. Love you, Mom #2

Tash - you ARE the light of my life. You will always be what gave me purpose. I've always lived my life for you and I will continue to do so. My heart breaks every time I breathe - it beats the repetition of your name. I don't imagine I will ever heal. I feel your hands in mine, your body next to mine. Remember all those hospital bed cuddles? I'm sleeping with your bear - I will give her back on Thursday. I would give anything to have you here - for one more minute, one more hour, forever....I love you and I will fight to keep your memory alive. I wish you were here - you would love seeing all the family together. We would laugh our butts off at all the Facebook attention you are getting. EVERYBODY loves you. After all, who wouldn't love you? You brought sunshine to everyone's life. I love you, my baby girl.I am so happy you never have to do another dialysis treatment. Your body is free - free of the pain and the restrictions that kept you from being truly free in this life. I will be there with you one day - it will be just us again and we will have so much to share! Wait for me....Thank you for letting me be your mom. I love you and will forever. MOM
